

YOUR award winning faculty

Dr. Mark Stine, Associate Professor of Communication Studies and chair of the department, has taught at Wilkes since 1999 and studies mass communications in global perspective. He has both real world and academic experience in the industry. He was awarded (with Dr. Hepp) Wilkes' first interdisciplinary teaching award in 2005.

Dr. John Hepp, Associate Professor of History, has also taught at Wilkes since 1999 and studies urban history and the history of technology. He is the author of a book on culture and technology in Philadelphia. He is the recipient of Wilkes' Carpenter Award for outstanding teaching and (with Dr. Stine) the interdisciplinary teaching award.

Study the history and culture of London!

January 2-9, 2013

A spring semester course with up to three credits in either Communication Studies or History that includes seven days and six nights in London.

STUDY the history and culture of London while visiting one of the world's great cities

Join us for a carefully crafted study tour of one of the world's greatest cities. Integrating classroom and experiential learning, this tour will:

- ◆ Develop your understanding of the history and culture of the city at locations throughout London
- ◆ Visit a variety of sites ranging from museums to the Abbey Road to department stores to Buckingham Palace to the Olympic sites
- ◆ Consider how culture and history interact to create London and how London is different from American cities
- ◆ Explore London actively for seven days by foot and by bus and by tube

EARN credits in Communication Studies or History

Professor Hepp with students at the British Museum

Wilkes students (and those at King's and Misericordia) will register during Spring Semester 2013 for up to three credits in Communication Studies or History. Non-Wilkes students and Wilkes alumni should contact the tour leaders for more information. In addition to a planning meeting in the fall, the class will meet once in January on the day we leave, everyday that we are in London, and three times during the semester.

You will have the opportunity to work closely in small group settings to maximize your learning while in London. To make the most of your experience, no more than sixteen students will be admitted to both classes. Be forewarned, we will be walking a lot on this study tour!

SAVE through group travel rates

The travel fees for this course include: (1) round trip airfare to London (2) ground transportation between Wilkes-Barre and the airport and Heathrow Airport and our central London hotel; (3) six nights in a budget-class hotel or better (multiple occupancy); (4) six breakfasts in London; (5) dinner on the day of our arrival; (6) any required museum admissions; and (7) a Transport for London pass good for our entire visit. The cost will be no more than $2,250 per person (multiple occupancy). Please contact the tour leaders if you would like a single room (in the past, this has cost approximately $600 more).

STAY in the heart of London

We will be staying at a modern hotel in central London. Each morning, breakfast will be served in the hotel. We will be within walking distance of many sights, and London's outstanding Underground and bus system will be close to our door.
